Lone Patrol Camp

What's so special about lone patrol/watch camping?

Lone camping is what Scouting is all about, independent young people, peer to peer learning and mountains of fun!

Does the Patrol/Watch Leader need a certain award?

The young person in charge must have a properly assessed Level 5 Camping Adventure Skills Badge

Is there a form?

If your camp has more than 4 nights you will need to complete the Overnight and International Approval Form Part A and give to your Group Leader.

A Lone patrol camp is a great way for scouts to prepare for annual camp. Scouters may need to assist in the preparations for the camp, and discuss it with parents.

Final Checklists

Now that you are on the final stretch, there should only be a few small things to do.

- Check back over your risk assessment
- Ring all the suppliers (the campsite, bus operators, programme providers etc) and confirm that you will be with them soon
- Make sure all Scouts are ready for camp and looking forward to a great adventure!
- Make sure your emergency document is complete and your home contacts know what is expected of them
- Issue your final timetable

A scouter should work closely with the Patrols and Activity Leaders in their final preparations.

Reviewing the planning of your camp

The best place to review the planning of your camp is when you are on the camp itself. Take an hour or two some evening and discuss all aspects of the planning.

- Was everyone involved in the planning in some way?
- What was the experience like?
- What did each person learn?
- Was the budget right?
- Was support from Scouters adequate?
- How did the planning compare to the planning of a Troop camp?
- Do you have the equipment you need?
- What did you find most enjoyable?
- What did you find most difficult?
- Would you do anything different next time?
