Plan: Election

Running an election can be a fun activity, if you put a little effort in! Everyone can get into the spirit of having a campaign, making speeches, and convincing people to vote for you.

Candidates & Seats

It is a good idea to go with three seats to be filled as this allows for the voting system to be demonstrated fully. Have at least five or six candidates to make it interesting. These should be scouts who are good talkers and will get into the spirit of the activity.

Posters:

There are sample posters on the following pages. You can use these, or candidates can make up their own. The policies on these sample posters represent a simplified selection of the political positions in Irish elections. As much as possible have the candidates reproduce these perspectives to ensure the election is based on policies rather than personalities! Have posters and literature up in your meeting place before the rest of the scouts arrive, set the right atmosphere from the start.

Canvassing and Speeches

Allow time for the candidates to move around and canvass people. If you are running games or other activities, the candidates should take the time to meet everyone. Also, if you like, give each candidate two minutes to represent themselves and their views. Or, if some of the candidates like, run a quick debate on local issues, like opening a new swimming pool, or closing schools on Fridays

Voting

There are sample ballot papers below. Print out enough for all scouts.

Do: Election

On the night, have a scout, who is not a candidate, explain everything throughout the night. Make sure to keep things active and moving along. This is about having a practical and fun look at the election process!

PR-STV

Proportional Representation (PR) is used in elections for the Dáil in the Republic of Ireland and for the Northern Ireland Assembly. This system helps give smaller parties and independents a fairer representation. PR-STV system (proportional representation by means of the single transferable vote). PR-STV allows the elector to indicate their first and subsequent choices for the candidates on the ballot paper.

Voting

Explain the system to everyone. If you want hand out the ballots. Or maybe set up two polling stations where people have to call to.

- It is a secret ballot. This is important as no one can see how you vote, which means you can't be bribed or intimidated to vote a certain way.
- On the ballot paper all the candidates are listed alphabetically. A voter marks candidates in order of their preference. They put 1 in the box of the candidate they want to give their 1st preference to, 2 in the box of the candidate they want to give their 2nd preference to and so on. A voter can just write as many or as few preferences as they wish.
- If some marking other than numbers in descending order of preference is used – eg a tick or x in a box – the vote is considered invalid and is not counted.

The Right Stuff

Vote: Kerri Kerry The Right Part

Low Taxes: You deserve to spend your own money.

Less Regulation: More innovation and entrepreneurship, less big government

Roads: More and better roads to help reduce traffic.

Security: We need better security measures – You deserve to feel safe in your own home.

Immigration: Only legitimate refugees, in smaller numbers

Vote 1: Mikey Mayo

Lively Liberals

Equality: Let's make this a fair world for everyone – not just the majority.

Community: A programme for government that supports all communities.

Environment: A sensible approach that will save the planet for your children.

Civil Liberties: The right to speech for all.

Transport: A decent public transport system.

A vote for Kerri is a vote for you!

Vote Karol Cavan The Local Man!

Counting

Independent officials, called Returning Officers, oversee the counting process, appoint one for your count. First thing is gather and open all the ballots. Count them to make sure there is as many votes as people who voted. Then check if they are all valid, disposing of any spoilt votes.

Next calculate the quota, the minimum number of votes needed to guarantee the election of a candidate. Dividing the total number of valid ballot papers by the number of seats plus one and then add one. For example, if you have 1,000 ballots for three seats it would be 251 ($1,000/4 (3+1)$, then +1).

Sort the ballots according to the first preferences . If on this, the 1st count, anyone exceeds the quota they are deemed elected. If they receive more than the quota, their surplus votes are transferred proportionality to the remaining candidates according to the number 2s. If no one else reaches the quota after this, the lowest of the remaining candidates is eliminated and their votes are transferred to remaining candidates according to the next preference indicated on them.

Counting continues until all the seats have been filled. If the number of seats left to be filled is equal to the number of candidates still in the running, those remaining candidates are declared elected without having reached the quota.

The Returning Officer makes the official announcement of the elected candidates.
